HONGKONG, JULY 4TH, 1890.

THREE or several important subjects touched upon by Dr. Eitel in his Educational Report for 1889. Dealing with the question of female education he says the greatest difficulties in the matter of school attendance are those Chinese girls who are purchased servants, owned by Chinese families and employed within the family as nursery maid. He says he does not advocate the introduction of the Colony of a compulsory education law, as there is no need for it, but the employment of purchased children in domestic service and the employment of children in carrying building materials up the hill, and in other forms of public labour, seems to him to call for legislation such as would naturally stimulate the school attendance of children who at present receive no education at all, and notably the female servants permanently sold or rented, pledged as security for money lent. The Government is to move, as in the opinion indicated it seems to me that the conditions of the Chinese girls in the Colony are such that it would be impossible to care for the education of the children of the servants, and the Government have no means of doing so.
